TO the READER.

I Hope, after twelve years Experience in the business of Schooling, I may be thought sufficiently sensible of those distracting troubles, and anxieties that perpetually attend the Calling. The removal of some of these is the principal end of the present undertaking.

The contradictions that are every day propos'd to little Children, how can they choose but puzzle and torment them, when the Masters themselves (that pursue the common method) are so miserably confounded, and utterly unable to reconcile their way of spelling with an English pronunciation?

The Rule that I lay down is brief and plain and easie, viz. All words must so be spell'd, as they are afterwards to be pronounc'd. But this they dare not venture on, for fear (forsooth) of straying from the common road, or slighting of a rule that was made and intended only for the Latin tongue. See, I have broke the ice; and that in such a natural, familiar, and pleasant method, that the Child shall have waded thorow three parts (at least) of all the words that are used in English Authors, before he meets with any considerable irregularity.

I could enlarge, but I reserve it for another place. The trial of a few hours will fully satisfy the man that doubts, and more than answer any reasonable expectation.

E. Coles.

But before I proceed, I must give you a brief account of what I have done already.

Of the ALPHABET.

IN the Letters are commonly considered three things. Viz. The Name, the Figure and the Power: This Power should be included in the Name; and the difference both of Figure and Power together, should produce a different Name. This Name and Power so often thwarting one another, has given occasion to several Endeavours of Correction; and as I believe, some gradual Correction to be feasible, so I believe that a sudden and universal Alteration is altogether impossible. Some are so fondly wedded to their toothless

Anti-quity, they would not for a World sit out of rheir Grandam's lap, and deserve not to be envy'd their felicity: If they are not sensible of the Absurdity, their Eyes, Ears and Brains, are not all worth three-pence, as Ben. Johnson observ'd long ago (in his English Grammar.)

I in the other Power (meaning a Consonant) is meerly another Letter, and would ask to enjoy another Character

He's pleased, It has obtain'd; and by the addition of jod and vau, or (as some call 'em) jea and vee, the number is encreased to 26.

But he that intends a different Type for every different force of every particular Letter, will handsomly augment his Alphabet, and miserably confound the Compositor and his Founts. He must have four a's at least, as Fall, Father, Fame, Pharaoh. He must have six or seven e's; as Equal, Peter, Were, Even, Ever, Yes, Her: and as many i's; as Will, Wile, Intrigue, Medicine, Birth, Shire, Irk, &c. Nay, not the Vowels only, but the Consonants also, (whose sound is sometime variant, sometime single, sometime double, and sometime none at all) will require three or four Characters apiece; as Abel, Habit, Subtle: and sometimes more, as Sceptick, Civil, Schism, Second, Facile; as Gin, Begin, Legend, Legacy, Gnaw, Gnat, &c. And because of the several Hands that are Writ and Printed, the great and small Forms, &c. he'll need the utmost Assistance of Cadmus, Palamedes, Simonides, Mercury, Proteus, and Apollo himself. Some general distinctions have been propos'd by Mr. Butler, Dr. Wallis, and others: but the Wise, Conscientious and Ingenious, have been so few all along, that they have not been able to bear it up against

against the Stream of the Ignorant, Lazy, Boisterous and self-conceited Populace. Frangas enim citius quàm corrigas quæ in prævum induruerunt. Mr. Butler's Reformation was grounded on the Old original Teutonic, and was something too violent. For (as I said before) whatsoever is done in this particular, must be (and will be) leisurely and by degrees: the greatest impediment hath been from the Printers: whereof some were ignorant, some were inable, and other some were obstinate: but now their Knowledge, Power and Compliance will prove the greatest furtherance.

They are sufficiently solicited: no new Types are required, and I know nothing but Malice, that can be objected. 'Tis an easie matter to let the broad â, î, and ô be circumflexed to make the strong ſ long, and the soft one short. 'Tis easie to distinguish the soft ch and th from those that are strong and hard, by a different Character (suppose the full and round Letter strong, and the black Italian Letter soft, or vice versâ): yet this is all. There needs no different Characters for c and g save when they are strong before e and i, and that's but in very few words; as Cis, Cedron, Aceldama, Skeleton, Sceptick, Anger, dagger, Engedi, finger, linger, geese, geld, get, Gennelaret, Gergelene, Gethsemane, gewgaws, heterogeneous, homogeneous, stagger, swagger, target, together; Gibeon, gibberish, Gibbons, giddy, gift, gig, Gilbert, Gilboa, gild, Gilgal, gills, gimlet, begin, biggin, piggin, noggin, GINNY, gittern, give, and (it may be) one or two more.

Touching the instilling of these first elementary Principles into Children, take one Observation from the great School-master Quintilian.

Non excludo autem id quod est notum, irritandæ ad discendum Infantia gratiâ, Eburneas etiam literarum formis in lusum offerre, vel siquid aliud quo magis illa ætas gaudeat, inveniri potest, quod tractare, intueri, nominare jucundum sit. Cùm verò jam ductus sequi cæperit, non inutile erit. eas tabellæ quàm optimè insculpi, ut per illos velut sulcos ducatur stylus. l. i. c. i.

Take notice first, how soon he begins to inform them, and that's as soon as ever they begin to imitate your Speech (for I see no reason why his Infancia may not be taken properly): and then the method, by giving them Graven Images of Ivory Letters to play withal, or else in Sugar, or whatsoever else you see they take delight in. And so soon as his hand (saies he) is capable of imitation, let him draw something like a Pen through the Furrows of a Letter neatly cut upon a little Board.

O F T H E T A B L E S.

Children are not to be troubled with Rules and Exceptions ; with Definitions and Distinctions.

Their Judgment is little or none at all, but they are actively capable of Imitation, to the wonder of our Natural Historian. Therefore I fall immediately upon Practice.

The first practical Table is plain, even to superfluity ; without confounding their weakness with Notions of Guttural, Palatine, and Labial Sounds, and without propounding any feigned uncouth Gibberish ; whereas we have plain Examples enough of real English words. But because Men usually espouse that pronunciation as properest, which they have been accustomed to, therefore they will be quarrelling at some Particulars.

Let them know, that in these things I have been jealous of, and oftentimes divorc'd my self, and have follow'd that pronunciation which I have for many years observ'd to be most in use among the generality of Scholars : I have had opportunity of making Observations.

I was born and bred [for a dozen years] in the very heart of England, I spent almost as many in her very eye, and after that as many more in [or about] the very head of all the Kingdom

Moreover, I have perus'd the most approved of our English Poets, whose general consent in riming is the best authority the case is capable of.

*Bold sons of Adam, when in fire ye crawl
Thus high to be
Perch'd on the tree,
Remember but the fall. Cleevl. 97.*

*And then a Serpentine do'st crawl
Now a straight line, now crookt, now all Lovelace, Luc. 18.*

*The Kings impartial anger light's on all
From fly-blown Acc'ron to the thundring Baal.
Cowl. Dav. 60.*

This proves that Baal in English is but one syllable, and has the sound of Ball and Bawl.

A large collection of these I have at hand, which might be (if occasion were) produc'd.

The second Table is as plain as the first, without perplexing them (again) with simple and Compound, primitive or derivative, and such kind of conjuring stuff. To what purpose are children bid to put a difference between their English and the Greek or Hebrew words? What ear-mark shall they know them by? Or, do we Schoolmen our selves indeed know which are which? I doubt when we have once substracted the words that are of the British, French, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, and Persian derivation (wherein the Etymologists are exceeding defective) I doubt we should have but a poor pittance left us of English or Saxon words. I follow the common way as far as I am able; yet not because it is the common way, but because cause it agrees so far with my principle, and does not contradict the proper end of spelling, which clearly demonstrates my aversion to innovation, except where absolute necessity requires it.

'Tis in the two last Tables that I contradict that common way of spelling which contradicts it self: In this place therefore I condemn the antick, and justify my modern Method.

Spell, in old English signifies a word, and to spell, is to word it, or handle words in general. But by use it has obtain'd a stricter meaning, viz. The gradual composing of words, and such a resolving them again into syllables and letters.

This is useful so far (and no farther than) as it is subservient to true reading, writing and speaking, and consequently to our understanding one anothers minds for mutual converse. So far as it doth not answer this end, so far it is defective, or erroneous. But the common way of spelling doth not only not answer this end of assisting the true pronounciation in speaking and reading, but is quite contradictory and very prejudicial to it, e.g. Their grand and fundamental Rule is this, whatsoever letters may begin a word, must also begin a syllable.

First therefore I desire to know why they themselves write Gyp sy, Jas-per, Scep-tick, &c. when they had told us that ps sp and pt would begin words?

Secondly, there are almost two thousand English words, which, if they were so spel'd, would quite lose their English pronounciation: as may be seen at large, in the 3d. and 4th. Tables. The foundation being shaken the superstructure also totters.

A single consonant (say they) between two vowels must needs be joyned to the following vowels. Shew me the the ground of this necessity: I say there are no such English words as a-ni-mate, e-ve-ry, de-li-ver, &c. And it needs no other Proof, than the having on a pair of English (not Arcadian) Ears. Again, when the sound (say they) rests hard upon a Consonant, then it must be doubled. Therefore we are bound to write habbit, studdy, and to commit above a Thousand more such barbarous Absurdities: And therefore they themselves write shaddow, widdow, tallent, &c.

I'll instance in one more, ti before a Vowel is sounded like fi.

This Rule is absolutely false. For there is not one word in all the English World (let their extraction be what it will) where ti sounds fi (except totius be an English word.) I know how Syllables are drawn out in singing, &c. but speak of the proper Pronunciation of common English prose.

One word more of the first original of these mistakes.

Dr. Wallis observes (in the Præface to his English Grammar) how all the English Grammarians have confounded our Language by their violent forcing it to the Latin Method.

Omnes enim ad Latinæ linguæ normam hanc nostrum Anglicanum nimium exigentes multa mutila præcepta de Nominum casibus-----aliquæ similibus tradiderunt, quæ linguæ nostræ sunt prorsus aliena; adeoque confusionem potius & obscuritatem pariunt, quàm explicationi inserviunt.

Because they had met with such and such Rules for the dividing of words in Latin, therefore the English must of necessity be just so divided! Those Latin Rules were suited to the Latin pronunciation. And if Latin had been naturally pronounc'd as we pronounce it now, those Rules had been as improper for that Language, as they are for ours. 'Tis folly for any language to be guided (in this particular) by another on which it hath no dependence, and the Dr. hath prov'd that ours was in being before the Latin. But considering the end of spelling in all languages (which is the teaching to read or to speak) the true Rule of spelling (in all languages whatsoever,) is this;

Words are so to be spelt, as they are afterwards to be pronounced. But for men to teach folk to spell a word one way, and then to pronounce it another; What pitiful senseless contradiction is this? Yet nothing is more frequent amongst us. N, a, n a; t, i, s i; n a, s i, o, n, on: put it together, it must be pronounced either n a- s i-on (which word is no where to be found) or n a s h u n, and so he must contradict himself. We are taught to spell Ab-ra-ham, and afterward to pronounce it A-bra-ham; to spell Ba-al, and pronounce it Bawl; to spell bo-dy, and pronounce bod-dy, or something that is worse: I have seen this very thing confound and puzzle the poor children most abominably.

But how should it otherwise chuse, when it will confound the best of those Teachers to reconcile them. They themselves are so far sensibly convinc'd of this, that on this very ground they have given new names to some letters, and added other new ones to the number (for a new name, force and figure, do make an absolute new letter.)

Ai and au (say they) more clearly direct the Learner to the true sound of the words, than a-i and a-u divided, &c.

And

And in another place, in spelling this word Physician, say not p, h, y, phy, for p, h, divided lead not at all to the true sound of the syllable, &c.

And had this principle been thorowly persued, most of my labour had been spared. For if the letters are so to be named, as may lead to the after-pronunciation of the syllable; why not the syllables also so divided, as may lead to the after-pronunciation of the word?

But those men are exceedingly to blame, whose lazy cowardise (on this account) hath prompted them to throw off spelling altogether. I hope my method hath so far remov'd the difficulties, that we shall henceforward all agree; so well prevented the contradictions, that we may both teach and learn with more delight, more confidence and profit.

Δεῖ τὸν μανθάνοντα πρῆναι.

O F

Orthography.

Ingredienti mihi rationem, scribendi, occurrit statim, ita quosdam censuisse, esse scribendum ut loquimur & audimus. Vel Longus. Grammatici unus finis est, recte loqui, Neque necesse habet scribere. Accidit enim scriptura voci, neque aliter scribere debemus, quàm loquamur. Jul. Cæs. Scaliger.

Prosodia autem & Orthographia partes non sunt, sed ut sanguis & spiritus per corpus universum fusa. Ramus.

But the grave and truly classick Author is Quintilian, that had been a School-master twenty years before he wrote his Institutions. Per viginti annos erudiendis Juvenibus studia impenderam. Proæm Meritò igitur a Poetâ Coco Fabius vocatur Vagæ Juventæ summus Moderator. D. Pareus.

The Panegyrick in Martial begins thus,

Quintiliane vagæ Moderator summe Juventæ,

Gloria Romanæ Quintiliane togæ. l. ii. Ep. 90.

The greater this mans authority is, the greater is the fault of perverting his meaning. Yet some body (sure Mr. Cocker doth not, but) grossly belies him, in saying he would have us write, exactly as we speak.

His own words are these, in the seventeenth chapter of his first book: Ego (nisi quòd consuetudo obtinuerit) sic scribendum quicquid judico, quomodo senat. If the parenthesis indeed were out, it would be something to the par-purpose. but he speaks again without a parenthesis: Verum Orthographia quoque consuetudini servit ideoque saepe mutata est. ibid.

I take not out of the Writing Masters hands, what they think proper to themselves; I complain they are so defective, and have appropriated to themselves no more; For what's the making of a letter to their great profession of Pen-man-ship? 'Tis true that Orthography (true and fair writing) can no more be without letters, than a house without beams and bricks, &c. But those directions that go no further, will as soon accomplish their end, as the making of bricks, and squaring of Timber will perfect a building of Ornament and service, as for their Ornaments and Curiosities, they are oftentimes extravagant. And under pretense of flourishing a letter, they make it frequently another, or rather none at all. One who pretended unto skill in these affairs was pleas'd to commend and shew me one of Gettings Copy-books. I took the book, and doubled down the Copy as far as the great initial, and pray'd him to tell me the name of the letter.

The Gentleman was so uncivil as to nick-name it. I doubled down another, he (conscious of his former error) cry'd Ignoramus. I do by no means condemn (nay I commend and admire) their ingenuity, their fancy and dexterity. But these things ought to keep their proper places, not so to perplex and disturb the Orthography, not so to confound and abuse the very essentials of a letter, as to puzzle the very Masters themselves to determine which is which. Of those things that might be spared we have enough and to spare, but little enough of that which is absolutely necessary. Mr. Hodder (I think) hath ventured farthest of any, in his Rule for joyn-

joyning, where one letter ends the other must begin.

And why might we not as well have been directed, when to use the great letters, and when the small ones? Why might we not have been instructed how to divide our words when we have occasion (as we have in every other time almost?) And why not one word about the stops and pointing what we write? Tell me not these things belong to the Grammar; doth not all you do, belong to Grammar? I am sure the understanding of these things belongs to all that intend to fit themselves for commerce and conversation in the world, for answering the end of their creation, and doing service unto God in their Generation.

The Use of Capital or Great Letters.

The great Letters are called Capitals, either First, because the little ones are derived from them as their head; or, Secondly, because of their large bulk and appearance with a head above the rest: or Lastly, by reason of their use in signifying some head, that is, some first, Principal, Emphatical, Remarkable, or Eminent thing.

These things of note or eminency are reckon'd up by many, and by Mr. Daines above the rest: but all that I ever saw are exceeding imperfect. I will not warrant absolute perfection, but I promise to mend the matter by some necessary and useful additions.

Now these Capital Letters do either compose whole words and clauses, or else they serve for initials only. Of the first sort are the titles of Books, and their divisions: as THE HOLIE BIBLE, &c. THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES CALLED GENESIS
CHAP. I. &c. And

And whatsoever is thus wholly exprest by Capitals, is alwaies more then ordinarily remarkable; as some signal Name, Title, Inscription, or the like, e. g. I am THAT I AM, Exod. 3. 14. (take notice that the word I is alway so writ, My name J E H O V A H, Exod. 6. 3.

And grave upon it like the ingravings of a Signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD, Exod. 28. 36. & 39. 20. That thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful Name, THE LORD THY GOD, Deut. 28. 58. And this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS, Jer. 23. 6. And this is the writing that was written, MENE MENE TEKEL UPHARSIN, Dan 5. 25. Behold the man, whose name is THE BRANCH, Zec. 6. 12. THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS, Mat. 27. 37. JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS, John, 19. 19. TO THE UNKNOWN GOD, Act. 17. 20. And on her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH, Rev. 17. 5. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS, Rev. 19. 16.

To these many more might be added out of other Books; but these I judged of greatest consequence to children. Only take notice that there is also a very great difference between these Capitals themselves; and such words (among them) as are more notable and eminent, have (proportionably to their note and eminence) either the first or all the letters in a larger form than the rest. Hence it is, that in every chapter (almost)

of the Bible, the first letter is a larger, and the second (whether it be in the same word or no) a smaller Capital. As in the first Epistle to Timothy, PAUL an Apostle I exhort therefore--- This is a true saying, Rebuke not an Elder--- Let as many servants--- This leads us to the other use of the Capitals, when they serve for initials only. And as those directions did principally concern the Reader, so these that follow do chiefly require the Writers observation.

1. All those words that are at any time wholly compos'd of Capitals, must alwaies have the first letter a Capital one.

2. All names of Persons, Dignities, Relations, Offices, Arts, Daies, Months, Winds and Places; are to begin with a Capital or great Letter. This will be much illustrated by an induction of some particulars.

God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Jesus Christ, Jesuite, Christian. Heathen God and Goddesses. Saturn, Jupiter, Apollo, Mars, Mercury, Bacchus, Baal; Juno, Minerva, Venus, Ashteroth, &c. Angel, Devil, Michael, Raphael, Beelzebub, Legion, &c. Adam, Adamite, Charles Stuart, Eve, Catharine, &c. His Majesty, Highness, Grace; Your Honour, Worship; Sir, Madame, Monarch, Emperour, Emperess, King, Queen, Parliament, Pope, Patriarch, Cardinal, Bishop, Dean, Prebend, Doctor, &c. Lord, Lady, Prince, Duke, Dutchess, Marquess, Earl, Countess, Viscount, Baron, Knight, Esquire, Gentleman, Master, Mistress, &c. Father, Mother, Uncle, Aunt, Brother, &c. Ambassadour, Commissioner, Legate, Nuncio, Agent, Plenipotentiary, Chancellor, Treasurer, Governour, Warden, President, &c. Magistrate, Minister, The Court, Judges,
I Justices,

Justices, &c. Officer, Commander, General, Admiral, Colonel, Captain, Lieutenant, &c. Grammar, Logick, Rhetorick, Musick, Arithmetick, Geometry, Astronomy; Grammarian, Architect, Mercer, &c. Sunday, Monday; January, February, Shrovetide, Lent, Easter, &c. East, West, &c. Europe, France, England, Thames, London, Cheapside, White-hall, Corpus Christi Colledge, &c.

3. Every sentence must begin with a Capital letter. Thus the Rule is generally propos'd, without any more adoe: but I have something considerable to say to it. The meaning is, that every Treatise, Book, Chapter, Section and Paragraph must begin with a great letter. That's plain enough. When (by the Rules of pointing) you are come to a full stop, or period; signifi'd by one title, thus, (.) then the sentence is out: and the next that follows must begin again with a great letter. This is also plain enough. But you must know that sometimes a sentence is reckoned to begin, and so consequently a greater letter is to be made, when there was no full stop afore it. E. g.

1. When the words of another are quoted, they alwaies begin with a great letter. Gen. 1. 3.
And God said, Let there be Light.

And when propounded to another to say after you. Judg. 12. 6. Say now Shibboleth. See the general Confessions and Creed in the Liturgie.

2. In epistles there is seldom a full stop after the Compellation, yet the next letter is reckon'd to begin the treatise, and must be a great one. Of the same nature is the subscription at the bottom, because it is written apart from the rest.
3. A new particular oftentimes begins in the midst of a sentence, and then it must of necessity begin the line with a great letter, as

In the beginning of

1. Sentences
- 2 All proper names

4. For the same reason, because every verse must begin a new line, therefore it must have a great letter, tho' the sense preceeding were not perfect.

*Gen. I, 17, 18. And God set them in the firmament of the Heaven, to give light upon the earth:
And to rule over the day and over the night, &c.*

*Life is a bus'ness, not good cheer;
Ever in Wars.*

*The Sun still shineth here or there,
Whereas the stars*

Watch an advantage to appear. Herb. 71.

Lastly. Whatsoever words the Auther laies any kind of stress or force upon, these he either writes in a different Character, or else prefixes a Capital before them, or both. Hence those that think they write nothing but strength of wit and thunderbolts, will scarce vouchsafe you two words together without a Capital. They are indeed so much in fashion, that I reckon this a good Rule to go by, viz.

Whensoever you are in doubt, whether you had best write a little letter or a great one, be sure you write a great one. For this is the safer hand to erre on.

The Dividing of Words.

A syllable is not to be divided. The Rule is sound and good. The question will be, what a syllable is. A syllable (say some) is that number of letters as are spelt together at once. And the result from thence is this. You must not part asunder, what you must put together.

Others are more critical, and say, that a syllable is taking letters together, and uttering them with one breath. So that three blew beans in a blew bladder, rattle bladder rattle, is not the third part of a syllable, except you are short winded. For 'tis all but one breath, though often intercepted and struck into several sounds. One comes a little closer to the business (if he doth but understand himself) when he saies, for spelling right, the syllables you'll find by parting them in sound within your mind. But his examples and the rest of his method strikes into the common road, that leads both him and all of 'em into the common error.

'Tis not the combination of Consonants, but 'tis the ear that must distinguish syllables by the stop that is between them. In Scripture we stop not at Scri (as 'tis usually divided) but at Scrip: in Question we stop not at Que, but at Quæ, &c. And so should the sound determine every syllable or division, otherwise the pronunciation of one part must be suspended, till you know the other. When Scaliger saies we must write as we speak, understand him thus, or else he'll make mad work of it: As the old Grammarian V. Longus hath observ'd: Cum dicimus Hic est ille, unum c scribimus & duo audimus. Ergo scribendum est per duo c, Hoc c erat alma Parens? aut confutandum, quædam aliter scribi, aliter enuntiari.

Abbreviations.

THese have been touch'd upon by several Authors, and some Writing-Masters, but exceeding slightly, considering their large extent and use.

Some of them are common with us and other Nations.

In Comedians and other familiar and contemptuous discourses we frequently meet with their nick-names.
And because I never knew this bus'ness touch'd by any (though it be as needful as any thing else to the learning of the language) therefore I have added this following collection.

Pointing.

The business of pointing is punctual enough in others. I only design'd a supply of such material points, as were not to be had else-where. Therefore I refer you to Mr. Lewis, and put a period to this discourse, with this one observation from Quintilian: Scribendum ergo quàm diligentissimè & quàm plurimùm lib. 10. c. 3.

Primum hoc constituendum, hoc obtinendum est, ut quàm optime scribamus; celeritatem dabit consuetudo. Summa hæc est rei, Cito scribendo non fit ut bene scribatur: bene scribendo fit ut cito Id. ibid.
